Chairman's Message

Hello Ladies,

I hope those of you who have kids at school had a lovely relaxing half term. For those of us with teenagers, exam season is fast approaching, along with the hot season- arghh!! For those of you new to Thailand, we have 3 seasons here- the hot, the very hot and wet and the ridiculously very hot. We are coming up to the latter…

We do have good news though- we are also fast approaching our Annual AGM so save the date and read all about how you can join the Committee and make an impact on how our fab club is run on page 14 & 15 To put it bluntly, if we don't have a Committee, we don't have a club!

May I also take this opportunity to thank everyone for their speedy contributions to the recent fire in Klong Toei- fantastic job gals.

Jane

February Lunch Review

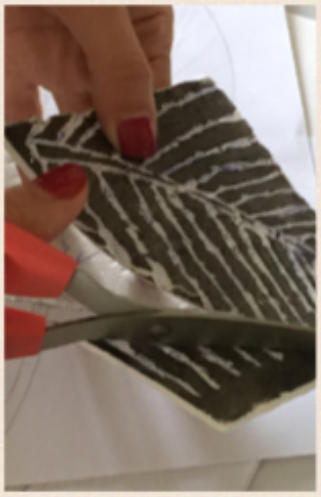
Patara Fine Dining

Where were you? Our March lunch was an absolute treat but there were only 6 of us there! Distance is no excuse- one of us had travelled from half way to Chonburi, another 10,000kms to join us so it shouldn't be too hard. Here is what you missed then.

The restaurant, on Thonglor 19, is hi-so Thai in both menu and in style- lots of black lacquer, subtle bronze highlights and bold bird of paradise flowers adding pops of red with added tones of brilliant green from the beautiful garden. Even the toilets were lovely- the same dark wood and fretwork with old lanterns and flashes of red blooms, but they did whiff a bit. I thought this might be the last incumbent until I remembered it was Grandma Pat and she smells of roses.

Everything was very stylishly served. We started with dainty crisps served with a warm chilli jam and a glass of lemongrass juice that tasted like the Centara spa smells. We then moved onto a fabulous smoked salmon pomelo salad- sharp but delicately refreshing, with a hint of spice. Mains were served In dainty pots on a celadon platter- stir fried veg, great except it included toadstools which older readers will know I am not keen on; green rice; crispy seabass with tamarind sauce- just beautiful; a baby dumpling of shrimpy deliciousness and dinky fish cakes which Clare assured us were easy to make by just bunging everything in a blender- it was all gorgeous.

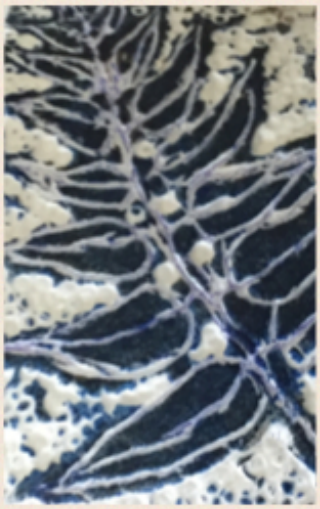
You also missed some great conversation- we covered Prince Phillip's bottom, the hazards of being kidnapped in Trinidad, the chicken man in Delhi who chops your chook with his feet and how to tell if your dog is poorly, amongst many other things. You really must come next time, it would be a shame to miss out again!



FEBRUARY CRAFT REVIEW

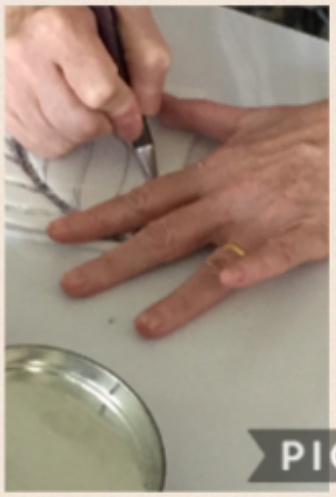
What a fun and creative morning!

With the opening introduction of "if anyone says they are useless at art, then they have to run around the compound in their undies", we got busy drawing 'the essence' of a leaf and creating attractive collages.



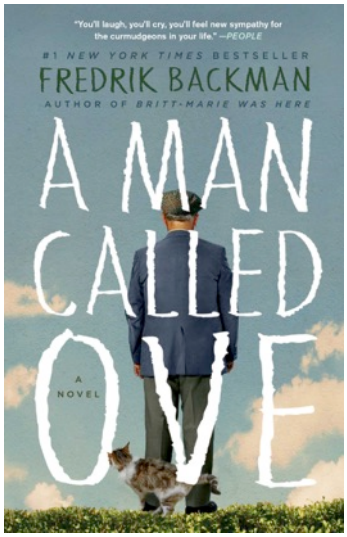
Our next instruction was to transfer our leaf drawings onto a material for making the stamps, before inking them and pressing them onto our collages.

Ta da! We all had masterpieces we were proud of.



Book Reviews

A Man Called Ove by Fredrik Backman



Ove is an angry old man next door. An isolated retiree with strict principles and a short fuse, who spends his days arguing with neighbors and visiting his wife's grave and who has given up on life. A man who sees the world around in black and white.
A young couple with two young daughters moved in next door and accidentally damaged Ove's mailbox, and this is when an unexpected and unlikely friendship forms. Page by page we come to understand Ove's past happiness and heartbreaks.
This is such a nice story! It's about the transformation we go through in life and how different events within our life affect and shape us. This book has great humor and great heart!

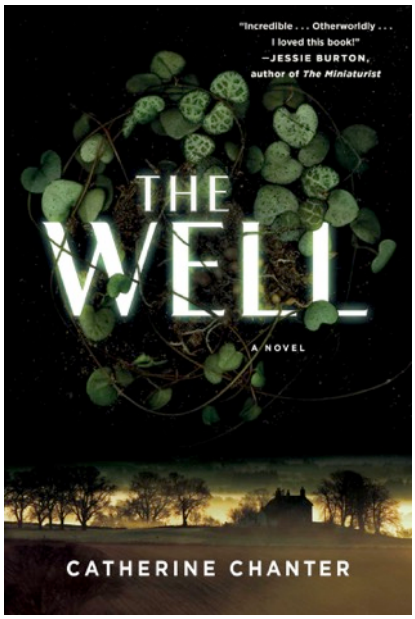
The Well by Catherine Chanter



Ruth is under house arrest and has very little to do but sit around and remember the events of the past few years…

Britain has suffered a drought for two years. Ruth and Mark, married for 20 years, escape London to lead the 'good life' in the country and run a smallholding. Mark, a lawyer, has been recently cleared of uploading child pornography and the couple hope for a fresh start.

The Well is indeed a paradise, the only place in England that remains fertile with rain. However after the continued drought and hardship, the locals resent their oasis, their dog is poisoned and they dread leaving to buy supplies, they become increasingly isolated. Ruth's daughter with her young son arrives with travellers followed by a group of nuns who call themselves the Sisters of the Rose of Jericho.

Ruth, narrating the story, tells of her immersion into this strange, hippie, feminist cult and the spell cast by the leader of the group Sister Amelia who declares Ruth 'the chosen one'. Live streaming of prayers and spiritual guidance, accruing a large following of women desperate to believe that Ruth can bring salvation.

Tragedy inevitable happens, Ruth's beloved grandson is murdered. The book changes from a dystopian novel to an excellent psychological thriller exploring guilt and trust.

A good book group discussion (we do occasionally talk about books), a better thriller than vision of the future with some unresolved questions regarding the relationships between the characters in the book. However it was a compelling read.

Classy night out over in Sathorn by Sara Carr-Legg

Sathorn area has some amazing restaurants and very cool quirky bars.
Here's a plan for a special night out for a special occasion. You can do all 3 in one evening or enjoy each venue at a time.

Isaaya Siamese Club

Included in Asia's 50 best restaurants the Isaaya Siamese Club sits in a 100 year old Thai villa on a small soi just off Rama IV. Gorgeous food and gorgeous garden with a large outside terrace. This is Thai food at it's fanciest - go spoil yourselves.
www.isaaya.com for more information about 10 minutes up the road and down a soi again is Smalls.

check out whose on in the evening - they have DJ's playing most evenings but go when they have a live Jazz band. Smalls is a shop house converted over 3 floors into a hip and happening place with French inspired furniture and retro revolving doors on the way in. stop off for a cocktail or a shot of absinthe.
Smalls Facebook page for anymore information

Namsaah Bottling Trust

popping up the road again around 10 minutes is the gastro bar Namsaah Bottling Trust. Namsaah, an old word for soda water, used to be bottled on the premises decades ago. The huge pink house has a huge bar on the ground floor with table set around ready to order some late night bar snacks. Namsaah have the most yummy cocktails with the most curious ingredients. Well worth a look and try.

January Welfare Update

Ice cream art and falling snow at Mahawong Daycare Centre

Everyone is back from the Christmas Holidays and normal life has started again. So on Wednesday the 18th of January the SILC ladies went to Mahawong Daycare centre for another Craft session.

The first thing you notice when arriving at Mahawong are the approximately 200 children sitting in neat rows in their blue school uniforms. How do we make this work every time? Luckily it is a lot of fun helping the children with their craftwork and we know from experience that all children will have a work of art in the end.

This time the children made a lovely ice cream cone and scoops. This is Thailand so you can have an ice cream in wintertime. We even had some 'snow', or was it dry leaves falling from the trees?

The children had to use their skills in outlining the cone, gluing on and colouring the scoops made of paper cupcake shapes, to create their own work of art. The children created all different flavoured scoops. They liked colouring the scoops so much that we had a real Bangkokkian traffic jam at the colouring tables and had to improvise two more tables!

We and the children very much enjoyed the different flavours of our ice cream and the falling 'snow' in wintertime. This is Thailand and everything is possible!

Welfare

Sponsoring a teacher at Heavenly Homes Orphanage

Heavenly Homes would like to thank SILC for our support and care over the years. SILC pa ys for a teacher to educate/care for the children in "Heavenly Homes", at 35,000 Baht for a year. As lot of the kids have a gap in their education and need help to catch up. They also need help with early education.

"Heavenly Homes Orphanage" provides shelter, safety, food and an education for children in need who live in the Mae Sot migrant community , on the border between Thailand and Burma. There are 85 children in care between the ages of 5-15.

When the welfare team visited this project, we were extremely pleased with the ethos of this home, as they did not turn any child in need down . What impressed us most that they looked after the children till adulthood. They have links with vocational schools and ensured each child was educated, learnt a profession and had a better future. They really cared for each child's future. Many of the kids in the orphanage have been abundant or neglected and fund refuge in Heavenly homes. It really must feels "like heaven" for the kids who have been abundant and neglected.

Cooking to create change

The Samutprakarn International Ladies Club goes above and beyond to help others, even if it means spending countless hours to create an English-Thai cookbook

by Morgan Thanarojpradit

BRINGING together the expat ladies in Bangkok and beyond, Samutprakarn International Ladies Club (SILC) was born in 1992 from two expat ladies enjoying their time together by the pool. SILC was initially created to bring together all the expat ladies (and local ones) in the Samutprakarn area. More than just a social club, SILC provides its members and various communities with support and meaningful activities.

This friendly and active bunch of ladies is no longer limited to only those living in Samutprakarn, although the club began that way. Currently comprised of expat and local ladies from 26 nationalities, the club provides a wide range of activities for its members including coffee mornings, lunches, book clubs, trips to explore the city, and getting involved with many welfare projects.

Chris Rajakarier is a member of SILC who, like most expat wives, moved to Thailand because her husband landed a position here nine years ago. What surprised her the most about Thailand was how friendly, receptive and kind Thais are.

Working as a Welfare Coordinator for SILC on a volunteer basis is like a fulltime job for Chris. With a passion to help make people's lives better, this opportunity allows her to extend a helping hand to others.

The group is involved in supporting a wide range of charity groups and foundations including FORDEC, The Mercy Centre, Heavenly Homes, Noh Bo Academy, J Square Bangkok, Sister Joan, Urban Neighbours of Hope, Place of Grace, Home of Grace, Nightlight, Bangkok Breast Cancer Support Group and the Queen Sirikit Centre for Breast Cancer Care, and Christian Care Foundation for Children with Disabilities (CCD).

Their latest project was the bilingual Cookbook, a comprehensive collection of 101 international recipes from over 26 nationalities. Collected from the members of SILC and friends, the ladies were more than happy to participate in the project. Tasks were divided among the members to collect, write and format, as well as proofread, translate and coordinate with the printer. The project coordinators were Chris Rajakarier, Shirley Tan and Sudeshna Srivastava and it was a great team effort from over 20 members.

SILC recently launched the brand new second Edition of the "Bilingual Bites" Cookbook, and held the book launch at Anantara Riverside Hotel Bangkok and was sold at the annual SILC Bazaar which garnered them a great response from the public. As the cookbook is in Thai and English, it is a must have for expats and locals who enjoy cooking and a passion to help the underprivileged.

All proceeds from the sales of the cookbook will be donated to the health, development and education of children in Thailand.

To purchase a copy of the "Bilingual Bites" Cookbook visit www.silcbangkok.com , or email Chris at silcwelfare1@gmail.com

Bangplee Temple & Market Tour

February 2016

Our first stop was Wat Bang Phli Yai Klang, which is a stunning temple with Thailand's longest reclining Buddha image, measuring 53 metres.

The temple is unique in its construction because you can actually walk inside the reclining Buddha image and climb up the internal stairs to the point of where the heart would be.

Inside the Buddha image we found that the walls were painted with many scenes. The general theme seemed to be that if you didn't lead a good life here then you would enter a very scary hell!

Our next stop was Wat Bang Phli Yai Nai, which was the home of one of the most revered Buddha images in Thailand. From here we experienced the 150 year old market and Jimmy introduced us to lots of local Thai snacks which we all enjoyed testing.

Dear SILC ladies,

On behalf of the project families from Sewing Socks And Sowing Smiles, I want to say a great big thank you for ordering 330 of our sock cats and dogs! And really, I should say first, thank you Marianne, for inviting us to the lovely SILC bazaar to sell our animals. Your order helped to provide much needed money and meaningful work, for the 6 asylum seeker families that participate in this project.
The photos of some of the children receiving their new sock cats and dogs were delightful! I made sure that everyone in our group got to see the photos as well.
Again, we were honored that you would give our project the opportunity to provide colorful sock animals for your Christmas baskets for needy children in Bangkok.
The photos of these beautiful little children with their new sock cats and dogs is priceless and brought smiles to all of our hearts!

Keep up the wonderful work of SILC!

With a grateful heart,

Linda Congdon/Sewing Socks And Sowing Smiles

Dear SILC members,

On behalf of the people of Khlong Toei slums I would like to take this opportunity to thank you all for your kind generosity with all you donated to the fire victims. More than 40 homes were burned to the ground and 70 families were affected by the fire. Hopefully these people will get the opportunity to rebuild in the coming months.

Also I want to thank SILC for the ongoing support with supplying the cooking oil for Sister Joan's food run. The food run takes place every second Friday. We support on average 96 families. They receive one 5kilo bag of rice, 5 cans of sardines, one bottle of fish oil and one bottle of cooking oil. This food run has been running for more than 15 years and SILC has been helping out with the oil for about 5 years. Now that Sister Joan has left Bangkok after 28 years of serving the community of Khlong Toei we the volunteers are desperately trying to keep as many of her projects going as possible. Sister Joan is now 85 years old and needs to go back to her order in Australia so she can receive the health care that she now needs. Without the help and continuing support of organizations like SILC and others we would not be able to do this. So once again thank you for your support and generosity.

Kay Hickey
